Analysis of Credit Fraud

Madison Byrd
Artificial Intelligence Institute
University of South Carolina
Columbia, South Carolina
mjadebyrd@gmail.com

Abstract*—Credit fraud datasets are extremely imbalanced, which can lead to issues when designing models to predict fraud. Creating a model to predict credit fraud is a balance between a low threshold that flags too many transactions and a high threshold that flags too few transactions.

Index Terms*—data analysis, credit fraud, predictive models

I. Introduction

II. Related Work

[1]

III. Methodology

IV. Results

V. Discussion

VI. Conclusion

References

[1] Author, "Title," Journal, year.